

Dianna Elizardo (she/her) is an Intern from San Diego Mesa College's Museum Studies Program. Dianna is a local working artist who grew up in San Diego and knows her calling is working within the intersections of the creative arts and academia. She believes academia can bring into words experiences art draws its expression from; while art is an accessible way to process realities theory seeks to explain. She applies this thinking in the zines, colleges, and writing she creates in the hopes of making learning enjoyable for herself and others. She is currently pursuing a Museum Studies Certificate at San Diego Mesa College.
